Archdiocese of Boston

Dear Friends,

In September 2005, with vocations at an all-time low in the Archdiocese of Boston and many people deeply wounded by the clergy sex abuse scandal in the Church, after much prayer and reflection and following the example of St. Pope John Paul II, I erected the Redemptoris Mater Seminary to form priests for the New Evangelization of Boston and for the Missio ad Gentes.

This is an international seminary that welcomes vocations from all over the world and prepares missionary priests with a special vocation to look for the lost sheep and for those who are far away from the Church. When I opened this Seminary, I sought to respond to the growing needs of a flourishing Hispanic community in Boston. By May of this year, I will have ordained nine priests and four deacons formed in this Seminary and currently there are 26 seminarians from ten different countries, preparing for the priesthood for the Archdiocese of Boston.

Thanks to the increased number of vocations over the years, last year the Archdiocese purchased an old building to expand the formation program of the Seminary and to respond to the growing needs of our seminarians. We are currently renovating this building which, when finished, will provide urgently needed bedrooms and bathrooms for the seminarians, as well as the Sanctuary of the Word, laundry facilities, and some meeting place.

Today I pray that the Lord inspires you to see the urgency of this project, and I appeal to your generosity and commitment to help make this vision a reality. May the Lord, whose generosity can never be outdone, richly bless you and your families with all the graces of his love.

Devotedly yours in Christ,

Archbishop of Boston
